i territoria de la Algune	This is a ticklish question. On the one hand, 80% of the people feel now that the regime is hostile to their interests. They do what they have to do in order to surdo not eat enough. On the other hand, widespread discontent is reflected in many ways, with serious consequences to the state. Inspectors are bribed to pass defective ways. Let me illustrate the results.	50X1-HUM
!	at right from storerooms after they have been accepted during the day. Next day the same products are turned in and accepted over again. People hide some of the crops in holes and ditches and return at night to collect them privately. Although the Government makes good propaganda out of slight, progressive increases in cash wages and downward sheding of prices, the populace is disillusioned and does not expect the situation to get much better. The standard of living is still far below prewar standards. Controls are stricter. The wartime freeze of the worker on his job has never lifted. Remuneration is lower in real terms. A kolkhoznik received 5-6 kilograms of grain for a days work in 1936-37. Today he receives only 1-1½ kolograms. Frices are still high after the 1949 reveluation of the ruble. Widespread popular discontent makes its influence felt in rany ways. It is a rotent force.
